

INSTALLATION VISION 2010

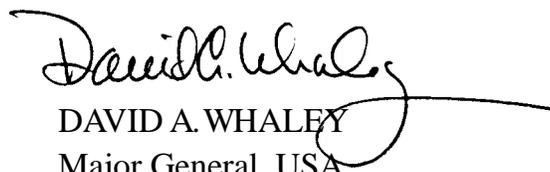

For more than 200 years Army installations, training centers, and depots have provided the support necessary to sustain a trained and ready force. This support has been successfully rendered in the midst of great turmoil. Our success is directly attributable to the hard work and dedication of soldiers, their families, and civilians working on Army installations worldwide.

To adequately support a future Army capable of conducting prompt and sustained operations on land throughout the entire spectrum of crisis, AND to support the joint warfighting team envisioned in Joint Vision 2010 and Army Vision 2010, Installation Vision 2010 must create enduring installations, armories and reserve centers that:

- ◆ support the warfighter,
- ◆ focus on Army core competencies,
- ◆ implement best business practices,
- ◆ eliminate excess and maximize use of facilities,
- ◆ provide quality living and working environments, and
- ◆ maintain stewardship of assets.

Our installations provide the “home” for America’s Army. Installation Vision 2010 will guide the transition of our home to meet the challenges of the 21st Century and the needs of our people. We must never forget that the Army is people, people who live and work on Army installations, and these installations will seek to preserve the values, traditions, and heritage of the Army.

DAVID A. WHALEY
Major General, USA
Assistant Chief of Staff
for Installation Management

The bedrock of the Army as an institution is its commitment to our enduring values:

Loyalty, Duty, Respect, Selfless-Service, Honor, Integrity, Personal Courage.

